

(This is not a LIfIA event, and is posted as a courtesy to interested members)

A collaborative event between the American Association of Higher Education, the Higher Education Academy (UK) and the Joint Information Systems Committee (UK)

Constructing, using and evaluating e-portfolios: Sharing collective experience and building opportunities for future collaboration

10th - 11th May 2005, Goodenough College, Central London, UK

This two-day international conference, the third in a series of collaborative events, will connect technical developments, pedagogic practice and user experience. It will provide the opportunity to explore and develop the potential of e-portfolio practice in supporting:

- 1. The development and exposition of high quality learning and teaching.
- 2. Transition(s) into Higher Education.
- 3. Learning and development, in particular support for self-regulated learning.
- 4. Student employability.
- 5. Staff and Faculty development.
- 6. Opportunities for collaboration between UK and US practitioners in cognate disciplines or constituencies.

The Conference is convened by leaders in the field in both the US and the UK. Following on from an event in Washington DC, it will feature:

- keynote presentations from international contributors;
- opportunities for detailed discussion and debate centred upon leading-edge practice;
- a strong emphasis upon the 'student/staff experience' in e-portfolio building and using.

(This conference is co-located with, and immediately precedes, the fifth International Conference on the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (sponsored by the Educational Development Centre, City University, London in association with the American Association for Higher Education, Campus Academy Program (USA); the Carnegie Academy for the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (USA) and the Subject Network, Higher Education Academy (UK))

Further details and booking information from:

http://www.recordingachievement.org/news_and_events/events.asp?sid=78